DWELLS ON LIFE OF METHODIST FOUNDER

Francis Asbury is Subject of Sermon by Rev. L. M. Edwards.

Francis Asbury, pioneer bishop of the Methodist church, and the man responsible for placing American Methodism upon the sound footing it has today and for its rapid growth, was the subject of the discourse by Rev. Loren M. Edwards at the morning service of the Methodist Memorial church, Sunday, who took as his topic, "The Prophet of the Long Road."

During his long career as the leader of the Methodist church in America, Asbury was continually on the road. Most of the time, in fact, until old age overtook him, he traveled on horseback, but during his last few years his conferees furnished him with a carriage.

Tempted many times to put aside the hardships he was required to endure on the road, for a life of ease, such as could have been his as chief of the church, Asbury persevered in his work and today he stands as the monumental head of the Methodist church in America. It is proposed that an equestrian statue to the great circuit rider and bishop be erected in the national capital.

Asbury was converted to the faith and had started his preaching career at the age of 15, volunteering for duty in America when the call was issued by Wesley Cook, and being unanimously elected bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church of the United States at the famous Christmas conference held in the city of Baltimore in 1784.

For more than 39 years Asbury labored in the cause of Christ, being in truth "a man without a home." He tells us in his carefully kept diary that he never rented lodgings or secured a boarding house, spending his nights either on the road, or wherever shelter was offered him. In his travels he covered practically every state in the union—north, east, south and west. Asbury received something like $80 for his services every year, a share of which he sent to his old parents in England. Asbury's preaching was of the immediate, compelling type. He was not a graduate nor a scholar; but he was direct, earnest, persuasive and passionate. He had a message and whenever and wherever he could get a hearing he delivered it. For more than 45 years Asbury scarcely missed a day without preaching somewhere, more often speaking three and four times a day.

On Sunday, March 31, 1816, after a constant service of 45 years, Asbury died, and now that a full century has passed since the prophet of the long road preached his last sermon, and en route to conferences breathed his blessing upon a few assembled friends, it is clear to all that Francis Asbury was the supreme human force of the American Methodist church, of which he laid the foundation and reared the structure.

At the evening sermon, Dr. Edwards preached upon the topic, "The Modern Saint."

New Rood Screen, St. Paul's Episcopal Church

(From a photograph by Baker.)

The Rood screen built across the chancel arch in the St. Paul's church, Mishawaka, adds much to the appearance of that house of worship, already pleasing in its finish and appointments. It is erected as a memorial of the late Mrs. E. A. Jernegan, who entered into the life eternal Nov. 26, 1914, and who, from the time of her coming to Mishawaka in 1872, was a faithful and loyal supporter of the parish, actively engaged in the various societies connected with the church, and heartily interested in its welfare. The "Bishop Knickerbocker" guild, of which she had been for many years an efficient officer, took the initiative in erecting the memorial, making handsome appropriation from its funds, and receiving numerous gifts from Mrs. Jernegan's many friends and coworkers, who desired to perpetuate her name in the church which she so greatly loved and where she had been for so many years a faithful worshiper. The design, which is in perfect harmony with the finish and furnishings of the church, was drawn by O. C. Brubaker, a local architect and a member of the parish. The screen is of solid oak, finished alike both front and back. The screen spans the chancel, supported by pillars which allow free passage-way to the choir stalls. The "rood," or cross, surmounting the screen, is three feet, six inches in height, and well proportioned for its position. The panels in the smaller arches are handsomely carved. The screen was built and installed by the Indiana Lumber Co. of South Bend, and has been much admired by all who have seen it. A brass tablet, beautifully engraved by William Parmenter, bears the inscription:

"To the Glory of God and in Loving Memory of Mrs. Nancy C. Sherman Jernegan. 1844-1914."

This Rood Screen was erected by the Knickerbocker Guild of the Parish, Easter Day, 1916.

WILL PATCH STREET UNTIL ANOTHER YEAR

Board Defers Action on Lincoln Way Improvement Until Later Time.

Lincoln highway will probably not be resurfaced until some time next year, according to the sentiment of the board of works members expressed at the meeting Monday morning. Although the resolution confirmed the improvement resolution calling for the resurfacing of the street they did not take any further action and the question hangs in the balance, the board having the power to bring it up for discussion at any time.

Street Commissioner Charles Doolittle was given orders to patch up the street wherever needed with cement. Some of the holes will last for a considerable time but most of them will not stand much wear even after they are patched. The pavement on the street is a 10-year guarantee job and it has now been down 16 years, still many want the city to maintain it for several years more.

City Atty. R. H. Jernegan said that he had interviewed most of the legal voters of the city along the entire street and the majority thought that the street could be patched up this year and that they would probably not object so much to resurfacing the entire street in another year or so.

Commissioner Doolittle reported that on W. Broadway between Charlotte st. and Forest av., the north side of the street had been graded for a considerable way by property owners along that side but that the residents on the south side of the street had taken no action and as a result a delivory of more than three feet had resulted near the middle of the street. The board gave him orders to remove the dangerous element in the street, but to leave the south half just as it was.

A new flush tank was ordered installed by the board at the corner of Smith and Fourth sts. Ben Baer presented a plat of land which he had purchased on Laurel st. for approval and the board ratified it.

Accompanied by Pinkney and her mother, she goes in the Durant yacht for a cruise. The boat hits a mine, and in the rush to leave her Maisie is trapped in the wireless room. She sends out the S. O. S. signal taught her by Lieut. Somers. The lieutenant aboard a U. S. cruiser arrives at the side of the doomed ship just in time to make a sensational rescue.

WEISWEAVER BOUND TO CIRCUIT COURT

Daylight Bandit Pleads Not Guilty But Evidence Warrants Holding.

John Weisweaver, who took several articles from the Abraham Piser store, 225 S. Smith st., Friday noon, and was captured after an exciting chase and struggle, pleaded not guilty to two charges when arraigned before Judge Feig in police court Monday morning.

Burglary and petit larceny were the charges made against Weisweaver, but after hearing the evidence Pros. James Hennessey asked for the withdrawal of the burglary charge. On the larceny count Judge Feig bound Weisweaver over to the circuit court under bonds of $500. Evidence presented showed that Weisweaver entered the store while to one was in the place and took several ladies' dresses and a pair of patent leather slippers. When Benjamin Piser, the proprietor's son, came in from the back just as Weisweaver was leaving, the latter purchased a five cent handkerchief. The boy noticed the change sticking out of the man's pocket and followed him out of the store, crying for help. Weisweaver began running.

Joe Krillenberg, who was painting across the street, led the chase and caught him after several blocks. Krillenberg, after he had thrown Weisweaver to the ground, found several dresses stuffed down the front of the latter's trousers. These were displayed in court Monday and were identified by the proprietor.

Weisweaver when put on the stand said that he had been drinking heavily and remembered purchasing the handkerchief and the struggle with the men, in which he used a knife, severely cutting two of the men, but declared that he did not remember taking the articles which were found on his person.

ITALIAN STABS MAN AND FLEES TO HILLS

Carl Blackmore Victim of Assault Near Woolen Co. Report Man Caught.

Carl Blackmore, an employee of the Mishawaka Woolen Manufacturing Co., was stabbed and perhaps fatally wounded by a fellow employee, an Italian Monday noon. After the affray the assailant fled to the woods west of the city.

The men were on one of the side streets adjacent to the works, when Blackmore passed a good natured remark on the sombrero worn by the Italian.

"You don't like it, eh?" shouted the foreigner as he drew a 12-inch dagger from his person, and rushing towards Blackmore sunk it a considerable distance between his ribs on the left side of the body. Blackmore fell to the sidewalk and the Italian took to his heels. During his flight from the scene of the fracas another employee who saw the affair from a distance, picked up a brick and aiming it at the fleeing desperado hit him on the head which temporarily stunned him. He continued his flight, however, and when last seen was making for the woods, closely followed by the police in an automobile.

Blackmore was rushed to the St. Joseph hospital, where on examination, it was found he had been stabbed through the left lung. Physicians in attendance state that unless complications set in, he will recover.

In the sector of Terrazola valley, where fighting has developed upon Italian soil, the Italians have massed men and guns drawn from other parts of the front.

King Victor Emmanuel is reported to have gone to Vicenza, the headquarters of the Italian commander opposing the Austrian drive in the sector of the Adige and Astico rivers.

Tactics which have proved so successful for the Germans are being employed by the Austro-Hungarians and the high command is not attempting to drive through the Italian lines with a single stroke. The Austro-Hungarians are moving forward cautiously, the way being paved for infantry advances by bombardments of extreme violence.

To the east of the Meuse the Germans counter-attacked at Haudromont in an attempt to reconquer lost positions, but the assaults were repulsed by the French.

A night attack by the French in the sector of Vaux put Gen. Nivelle's troops in possession of a German trench. There was fierce hand-to-hand fighting in the darkness under the glare of star bombs.
